Weinstein victim: "I know that everybody—I mean everybody—in Hollywood knows that it's happening."

> De Cannes, who was in her early thirties at the time, was already an established actress, but she wondered what would happen to younger and more vulnerable women in the same situation. Over the years, she said, she's heard similar accounts from friends. "I know that everybody—I mean everybody—in Hollywood knows that it's happening," de Cannes said. "He's not even really hiding. I mean, the way he does it, so many people are involved and see what's happening. But everyone's too scared to say anything."

Weinstein gets turned on by women becoming more afraid of him.

"I was very petrified," de Caunes said. "But I didn't want to show him that I was petrified, because I could feel that the more I was freaking out, the more he was excited." She added, "It was like a hunter with a wild animal. The fear turns him on." De Caunes told Weinstein that she was fearing, and he panicked. "We haven't done anything!" she remembered him saying. "It's like being in a Walt Disney movie!"

On the left's incessant efforts to compare historical refugee crises to today's onrush of Islamic military-age males independent.co.uk/news/world/eur ..

>he also played a major role in supporting refugees around the world in the aftermath of the First World War

Most of those refugees came from within Europe, not "around the world" >the plight of refugees from Syria and Burma continue to make headlines around the world

The circumstances of WWI have nothing to do with today's SJW nonsense plaguing the West. Most of those refugees then were European Christians, particularly Armenians and Greeks, who have since been ignored since acknowledging the genocide against them today would be "xenophobic." That had nothing to do with today's liberal policies of ignoring the ongoing genocide and persecution of Christians throughout the Middle East and South Asia while throwing Europe's and America's borders open and letting in thousands of Islamic young male militants under the guise of "tolerance" and "diversity."

As for Burma, there's not one mention of it anywhere in the present case by the news media. Why? It's because those responsible for the persecution there are either Buddhists or socialists, and of course the fake news MSM would never dare slander fellow leftists. If they can't blame Christians or Jews or white people, then it will never reach the low information SJW

Dear Pau Many thanks for your logical and great posts on Twitter and fantastic YouTube videos despite all efforts to shut you down. Essentially you are right there is a big transformation going on in the world processes right now and that Francis Fukuyama's theory in practice is completely argues the world did not come to the end of history is evolving further on. The Conservative trend is really taking place around the world. You are engaging people to use their common sense. Not everybody has the guts to do it Regards Ilnur Kalimin. Disagreeing with leftists is now a gateway drug for young people becoming Nazis. This is their new argument.

> After all, it's only natural that among the subset of young people who hear Yiannopoulos (or Mike Cernovich or Paul Joseph Watson, or) rant about "globalists" and migrants and liberals and Muslims over and over and over again, some of them are going to seek out harder fare. Just a few years ago, there simply wasn't much of a youthful reactionary movement, online or offline. That's changing, and it's in part because of well, a small cabal of secretive conservative funders.

Bump fire stocks being pulled off the Internet.

SlideFire Bump Fire Stocks Being Pulled Off the Internet, I received a Notice sell firearm accessories on the internet for a side business have a distributorship for SlideFire brand

Received notification late after 5pm that ALL product must be marked as out of stock or delisted within 48 hours

Not sure if ATF is going to release out with recent incident and now this email it does NOT look good searched my competitors and the internet and ONLY found a few sellers on GunBroker that have them out - assume they will be removed as well

This may have been why the police initially thought at least 2 shooters.

> One other thing some of the "overlapping" automatic fire you hear in these clips is called "slap back delay" and is actually the gunfire echoing off of other buildings. You would think if it were just an echo that it would be consistent but changes in wind and people moving in front of and away from the line between the building and the microphone on the recording device will make the effect come and go. You can hear the quality of the music change in the beginning as people are running in and out of the line between the PA system speakers and the microphone

Rees-Mogg brings the ownership.

Protester: "Shame on you, Jacob Rees-Mogg. Tories out."
Jacob Rees-Mogg: "Hello. What would you like to ask me?"
Protester: "You're not welcome here. Get out."
JRM: "What do you disagree with me about?"
Protester: "Everything."
JRM: "Mention something specific."
Protester: "Abortion rights, women's rights, austerity. Everything. You're a despicable person."
JRM: "Well, we may disagree on things, but just because you disagree with somebody, that doesn't make them a bad person. The two are separate."
Protester: "Mate, the things you're saying are harming people's lives. People are dying because of the things you are advocating."
JRM: "I don't agree with that. I think the policies the Government is implementing are making people's lives better."
Protester: "Really? Depending on food banks is making people better?"
JRM: "We have the lowest rate of unemployment since the 1970s and the highest number of people in employment."
Protester: "Yeah, precarious employment."
JRM: "Not precarious employment."
Protester: "What are you on about? You're ruining people's lives."
JRM: "Employment historically has always been the best route out of poverty."
Protester: "That's absolutely not true. That's a categorical lie. You're a despicable person."
JRM: "Let's leave my despicability to one side. What's important is to have the conversation. You're welcome to talk to me, but it's difficult if your intention is merely to shout and wave leaflets."
Protester: "This is not simple disagreement. This is not an academic debate. Everything you say is despicable."
JRM: "I think [the audience] want us to continue."
Protester: "I couldn't care less. They all hold the same views [as you]."
JRM: "Well, very nice to have met you."
[The protester is led away by security, to applause from the audience.]

Tennessee shooting was an alt-left revenge attack for Charleston. Both fringes have violent element, but mainstream left won't disavow.

> A note found in the car of a man charged with spraying deadly gunfire at a Tennessee church made reference to revenge for a white supremacist's massacre at a black church in Charleston, South Carolina two years earlier, law enforcement officials told The Associated Press
> The note could offer a glimpse into Emanuel Kidega Samson's mindset at the time of Sunday's shooting and a possible motive for the rampage which killed a woman and wounded six other people The Associated Press has not viewed the note but it was summarized in an investigative report circulating among law enforcement Two officials read to AP from the note

Sexual assaults by Uber drivers are up 50% year on year.

I fee he p ess. isolated and vu nerable and the nc dent has made me lone y now don t ke be ng in a veh c e with a man , don t know I had to move s nce the cab journey because was so worried the man knew where I l ved am haunted by the "what f?" scenarios

Pictured left: Samson Haile, 32, who sexually assaulted a female customer in the back of his cab. He was jailed for eight months. Right: Jahir Hussain, who was jailed for 12 years for attacks on three separate women in London. He groped two and raped the third, cutting off their underwear with a knife after they fell asleep in the back of his cab.

The number 2 trend has just 3,000 tweets.

#HerpesHillary has tens of thousands.

Twitter rigs their trends.

It still trended though. 😄

Hey @nytimes if I'm causing an "influx into hate groups," why do you keep begging to profile me & give me a bigger platform?

> The alt-right promotes a slightly softer set of messages. Its figures — such as Milo Yiannopoulos, Paul Joseph Watson and Mike Cernovich — generally frame their work as part of an effort to defend "the West" or "Western culture" against supposed left-liberal dominance, rather than making explicitly racist appeals. Many of them do not have references to racism and anti-Semitism, though they will creep up to the line of explicitly racist speech, especially when Islam and immigration are concerned.
> This apparent moderation partly explains why they tend to have much bigger online audiences than even the most important alt-right figures — and why Hope Not Hate describes them as "less extreme, more dangerous." Alt-right sites like Breitbart, formerly home to Mr. Yiannopoulos, as well as Prison Planet, where Mr. Watson is editor at large, draw millions of readers and are key nodes in a hyperkinetic network that is endlessly broadcasting viral-friendly far-right news, rumors and incitement.
> Fluent in the language of online irony and absurdism, and adept at producing successful memes, alt-lighters have pulled off something remarkable. They've made far-right ideas hip to a subset of young people, and framed themselves as society's forgotten underdogs. The alt-right provides its audience easy scapegoats for their social, economic and sexual frustrations: liberals and feminists and migrants and, of course, globalists.
> The alt-right's dedicated fan base runs into the millions. Mr. Watson has more than a million YouTube followers, for example, while Mr. Yiannopoulos has more than [illegible]. If even a tiny fraction of this base is drifted toward more extreme far-right politics, that would represent a significant influx into hate groups.

However, it's clear from CNN's report that the warrant targeted the Trump "campaign" - it was done during a time when "Manafort talked 2 DT"

Some kind of connection here, can't quite figure it out.

[illegible] who was arrested in Rotterdam on Saturday night was responsible for planning the bombing that would have killed untold numbers of commuters at rush hour on Friday if the ED had properly detonated. Rai Bakh was a Syrian refugee who arrived in the UK from Damascus.

The man who planted the bomb, an Egyptian who is yet to be named, is an illegal refugee who arrived in the UK three years ago as an unaccompanied child migrant. He traveled across Europe in an attempt to reach the infamous Calais migrant camp.

This is not the first time "refugees" have gone on to plot or carry out acts of terror.

Several of the jihadis massacred in Paris and plotters traveled through Europe by posing as Syrian refugees.

Rakhmat Akilov, supported Anis Amri, who carried out the Berlin Christmas market attack which killed [illegible] and injured. He arrived in Germany in 2015 as a refugee from Tunisia.

Rahmat Akilov, a man from Uzbekistan who drove a truck into people in Stockholm back in April, killing four, was also a refugee wanted in connection with a terror attack in Sweden.

Earlier this week, a 21-year-old Syrian refugee was arrested in the Oder-Spree region of the German state of Brandenburg after he was caught plotting a suicide attack in Berlin.

A knife attack earlier this summer that killed one and injured five others at a supermarket in Hamburg was carried out by an asylum seeker from Palestine who was also a refugee.

Psychological asylum seeker.

The man who carried out a suicide bombing in Ansbach, Germany outside a music festival last year was a Syrian refugee who was due to be deported.

Back in December, a 26-year-old Moroccan refugee was arrested after plotting a terrorist attack in Salzburg, Austria.

As we previously reported, Ahmad Mansour, an Arab Christian Pastor who raised several Swedish refugee centers said he saw multiple ISIS flags and warned that staff at the centers were trying to radicalize newly arrived migrants.

#2 I got my copy yesterday and plowed through it in less than 24 hours. This is THE most open and engaging political memoir I've ever read. It's not even a little dry or self-aggrandizing. Clinton spends time analyzing her own mistakes, but takes no prisoners when it comes to the people who also deserve blame for her loss. Clinton haters will refuse to believe this, but the book - like the Secretary herself - is also warm and funny throughout

Racist police protecting women from being raped. How dare they?

The women wore sexy cop outfits complete with hats and badges, and] some inexplicably had tear drop tattoos d awn on their face the activist group recounts. Historically the police have justified violence against people of color in the name of protecting white women and n wearing these costumes these women made a joke of that legacy of violence

If you have to call yourself an "anti-racist," you're probably a massive twat.

Brendan O'Neill

Remember when you cou d be pretty certa n that if someone descr bed h mself as an anti-racist he'd be a fairly decent, upstand ng c tizen? Now he's more ikely to be a se f-hating tosser who ives on Twitter and spends his days scream ng at white people for eat ng jerk ch cken and counting the number of b ack actors in every movie he sees so that he can Tumblr about t ater "Anti rac st" is fast becoming code for uptight, tragic neurot c misanthrope. I literally said this could be the explanation in the article.

You obviously didn't read it.

> Others claimed that the man wear ng the shorts was a different person.

> To be fair to Drew Griffin although he works for CNN he can't be put in the same category as most of their partisan commentators Griff n has done solid journa ism before, part.cularly when he stood up to the TSA after they put him on a terror watch list.
> Perhaps the story is more about how Trump supporters are so irate at the network that they will immediately assume the worst case scenario.

Hi Red Pill Black,

As you may know, our Community Guidelines describe which content we allow and don't allow on YouTube. Your video "WTF? Black Lives Matter Has A List of Demands for White People!" was flagged for review. Upon review, we've determined that it violates our guidelines. We've removed it from YouTube and assigned a Community Guidelines strike or temporary penalty, to your account.

Video content restrictions

YouTubers share their opinions on a wide range of different topics. However, there's a fine line between passionate debate and personal attacks. As our Community Guidelines outline, YouTube is not a platform for things like predatory behavior, stalking, threats, harassment, bullying, or intimidation. We take this issue seriously and there are no excuses for such behavior. We remove comments, videos, or posts where the main aim is to maliciously harass or attack another user. If you're not sure whether or not your content crosses the line, we ask that you not post it. Learn more here.

We asked Watson how he felt to hear about LeGate's threats against the man who built the Pepe bot

"This underscores how the left is so incapable of engaging in thorough reasoned debate on a level playing field that they routinely resort to dirty tricks and underhanded behaviour in an attempt to intimidate and shame conservatives," he said

"The major concern is that powerful Silicon Valley companies which have become the de facto public commons, are full to the brim with the kind of self proclaimed progressives who wouldn't hesitate to stoop to such tactics in the false belief that they have the moral high ground, in order to censor and silence dissenting voices."

Thinking that some art is crap is "cultural fascism".

It was soon obvious to my fellow students that I was not quite with the programme. In a class discussion early in my first semester, I made the mistake of mentioning that I believed in objective standards in art. Some art is great, some isn't, I said; not all artists are equally talented. This was deemed an undemocratic opinion and I was given a nickname: the cultural fascist. I've tried to take it affectionately.

Save me the "Islamophobia" sob story. The vast majority of Muslims killed in the UK were killed by other Muslims.

For the problems that exist are not just between minorities and their adopted country but between various minorities in their adopted country. Despite the much vaunted horror of Islamophobia trailed by anti-racists and others in Britain, those who have actually killed Muslims in Britain have been overwhelmingly other Muslims murdering them for doctrinal reasons. There has been one case of a Ukrainian neo-Nazi who was in the United Kingdom for a matter of hours before killing his Muslim victim. Otherwise, the most serious attacks on Muslims have been carried out by other Muslims. Many Muslims from the minority Ahmadiyya sect came to Britain because they are so persecuted in their native Pakistan. But it was a Sunni Muslim from Bradford who travelled up to Glasgow before Easter 2016 to stab the Muslim Ahmadiyya shopkeeper Asad Shah repeatedly in the head for what his killer regarded as apostasy and heresy. And it was not knuckle-dragging white racists but other members of the Muslim communities in Scotland who caused the family of the murdered shopkeeper to flee the country in the wake of that murder. Today in Britain it is rarely white racists who openly advocate the murder of minorities, but clerics from Pakistan who tour the United Kingdom preaching to thousands of British citizens the necessity of murdering other Muslims who disagree with them. Such problems within minorities are a foretaste of the intolerance to come.

Ethnic Swedes will be a minority in Sweden within the lifespan of most people currently alive.

THE FEELING THAT THE STORY HAS RUN OUT

population) — that cannot fail to have significant repercussions. Demographic studies show ethnic Swedes becoming a minority in Sweden within the lifespan of most people currently alive which raises the fascinating question of whether Swedish identity has any chance of surviving this generation. This question will also have to be faced by every other Western European country. Europe was proud of having international cities, but how will the public react to having 'international countries'? How will we think of ourselves? And who and what will 'we' be?

THE STRANGE DEATH OF EUROPE

The mainstream European media has the same affliction. Having internalised the Rushdie fatwa, the Danish cartoons and Charlie Hebdo lessons as much if not more than anyone. Europes media know that alone among subjects there is a physical as well as reputational risk to delving into Islamic matters. While they hide behind 'good taste' defences on such issues, all the time there are easier themes for them to revert to. The rise of the far right in particular is such a trope in journalism that the far right is said to be rising even when it is collapsing, as it did in Britain during the last decade. Nevertheless the powerful trope is often given further colour, such as when the right or far right are also said to be on the march. The headline claim that 'The far right is on the march across Europe' has been used promiscuously in recent years, whether the people in question are right wing or not. As the writer Mark Steyn pointed out at the time of the rise of Pim Fortuyn in 2002, 'Gay professors on the march just doesn't have the same ring to it.'

The idea that "moderate Muslims" celebrate terror attacks is a conspiracy theory. The mainstream media told me.

Then in passing Mr Goldstein let slip the thing of interest Friends who taught high school students in the predominantly Muslim areas of Molenbeek and Schaerbeek told him that when it came to their students' views of the terrorists who had just bombed their city, 90 per cent of their students, 17, 18 years old, called them heroes' Elsewhere, in an interview with De Standaard, the Belgian Security Minister, Jan Jambon, said that 'a significant section of the Muslim community danced when the attacks took place' As is the norm, Jambon was criticised for this by his parliamentary colleagues and the media He replied that he had the information from several of the Belgian security services But what he said, as with the revelation from Mr Goldstein, is in fact a glimpse beneath the surface that is afforded the public in stories following every act of terrorism in Europe. These stories are at least as responsible as the attacks themselves for the decisive shift that is occurring in the mood of Europe. Because although the bombs, gun and knife attacks are all of utmost concern, a secondary concern (but one that in the long run is greater) is the question of the relationship between the tiny number of extremists who carry out such attacks and the rest of the populations from the same background.

Having lost the contemporary argument on mass immigration, the left has instead resorted to re-writing history in a bid to normalize it.

One such effort, as practised by President Wulff, involved taking up any and every aspect of non-European culture in order to raise it to a level at least of parity with Europe. So, for instance, the more Islamic terrorist attacks occurred the more the influence of the Islamic neo-Platonists was raised and the more the significance of Islamic science was stressed. In the decade after those attacks the rise of the Muslim Caliphate of Cordoba in Andalusia, southern Spain, between the eighth and eleventh centuries moved from historical obscurity to being the great exemplar of tolerance and multicultural coexistence. This itself required a careful new version of history, but the past was being conjured up to provide some hope in the present.

Such aspects of Islamic culture soon had to sustain an almost unbearable burden. An exhibition called '1001 Islamic Inventions' toured London's Science Museum among others, insisting that almost everything in Western civilisation had in fact originated in the Islamic world. Ahistorical though such claims were, they developed the aura of faith. People needed them to be true and ceased challenging all such claims. It became a matter not merely of politeness, but of necessity to stress and indeed over-stress how much was owed by European culture to the cultures of the most troubled communities. When in 2008 a French medievalist academic, Sylvain Gouguenheim, published an essay arguing that the texts from Ancient Greece often said to have been saved by Arab Muslims with no knowledge of Greek had in fact been preserved by Syriac Christians, the debate became a heated political issue. Public petitions and letters denounced Gouguenheim for his 'Islamophobia' in coming to this finding. Few other academics even spoke out in support of his right to say what the evidence he provided showed. Cowardice aside, this was just one demonstration of an urgent need – as with the argument 'we've always been a nation of immigrants' that took hold at the same time – to change Europe's fairly monocultural past to fit in

1 Because you are disbelievers

"We hate you first and foremost because you are disbelievers, you reject the oneness of Allah, whether you realize it or not, by making partners for Him in worship, you blaspheme against Him claiming that He has a son, you fabricate lies against His prophets and messengers and you indulge in all manner of devilish practices

2 Because you are liberal

"We hate you because your secular liberal societies permit the very things that Allah has prohibited while banning many of the things He has permitted, a matter that doesn't concern you because you Christian disbelief and pagan ism...separate between religion and state thereby granting supreme authority to your whims and desires via the legislators you vote into power"

Kid sees it on TV, draws parallels between similar images, and starts asking questions. Makes for some interesting "teachable moments"

Shouldn't be hidden. The problem is a 9 year old has no way to understand that degree of evil. Their idea of villainy are Dr. Who villains

Dear @McCatchyDC - "Globalists" means globalists. It doesn't mean "Jews". Why do you think it does? Anti-Semitic, much?

> Anti-semitic messages were not far behind. Jack Posobiec, a voice associated with the far-right, called Bannon's firing a "coup" on behalf of White House "globalists" such as economic adviser Gary Cohen and deputy national security adviser Dina Powell. The white nationalist groups often refer to Jews as "globalists."

"Anti-fascist" pressure resulted in pedophiles being protected from prosecution.

These are the new heroes, according to MSM.

It was in the early 2000s in England that stories that the Sikh and white working-class communities had been telling for years were finally investigated by the media. These revealed that the organised grooming of often underage young girls by gangs of Muslim men of North African or Pakistani background was a theme in towns throughout the north of England and further afield. In each case the local police had been too scared to look into the issue, and when the media finally looked into it they too shied away. A 2004 documentary on social services in Bradford had its screening postponed after self proclaimed 'anti fascists' and local police chiefs appealed to Channel 4 to drop the documentary. The sections that dealt with the sexual exploitation of white girls by 'Asian' gangs were accused of being potentially inflammatory. In particular, these authorities insisted, the screening ahead of local elections could assist the British National Party at the polls. The documentary was finally screened months after the elections. But everything about this case and the details that followed provided a microcosm of a problem and a reaction which were going to spread across Europe.

Campaigning on, or even mentioning

Leftists think disagreeing with them is "committing violence".

Nothing else but a cult could produce this kind of deranged thinking.

PROOF: Anti-SJW videos are being demoted from recommended videos on YouTube.

Emmett says he personally witnessed efforts from leftists within Google to bias YouTube's algorithms to push anti-PC content off the platform's "related videos" recommendations

"I have read internal mailing list e-mail from SJWs absolutely incensed that there'd be, say, a Sargon of Akkad video appearing as a video related to one of their favorite SJW vloggers. This is what happens when you have non-biased algorithms, which, I believe, was true. I don't have to tell you that. In that e-mail, the SJW was quite literally asking that the 'related videos' function be perverted so that such a thing would stop happening."

According to Emmett the greatest threat is that ordinary users of Google and its related services won't even be able to detect the censorship.

"The software could just astroturf your Related Videos section, and you would be none the wiser. Sure, if you know what to look for, perhaps you'd notice. But the vast majority of the viewership would never ever know. That's the whole point of such a disinformation program, right? If you can tell it's disinformation, you would never ever believe it."

What kind of disgusting racist, sexist, alt-right Nazi would come out with such hate speech?

Suggestions

I hope it's clear that I'm not saying that diversity is bad, that Google or society is 100% fair, that we shouldn't try to correct for existing biases, or that minorities have the same experience of those in the majority. My larger point is that we have an intolerance for ideas and evidence that don't fit a certain ideology. I'm also not saying that we should restrict people to certain gender roles, I'm advocating for quite the opposite - treat people as individuals, not as just another member of their group (tribalism).

So [illegible] is going to make a 'roast' video about me. Here's what he'll probably bring up, just for the record

[illegible] of a blog I wrote about 'banning banter'. What I said, essentially boiled down to the fact that I was no longer going to accept 'banter' as an excuse for bullying

* In 2015, I went to work at Lea Manor High School in Luton, Bedfordshire as a Geography teacher. After six months I suffered a breakdown & left the position. I have written extensively about this period for TES and other teaching publications

* During this time, I suffered severely with my mental health & sought treatment. I am now well on the road to recovery

* Since January I have worked as a Content Writer for Chic Retreats, a London-based travel company. I'm on a start-up salary, but I enjoy what I do & am very fond of my team

* I've started a lot of projects that I've never finished - it's been a turbulent few years. I'm working to get back on track

* I've always been a large bloke. Diet & exercise going well though

* I am ashamed of none of this. Indeed, I feel it has made aide of Islam, the power-hungry expansionist side of Islam has become superior to the Sufis and the ismailis and the peace-seeking Muslims Reason Don't you mean defeating militant Islam?

Hirsi Ali No. Islam, period. Once it is defeated, it can mutate into something peaceful. It is very difficult to even talk about peace now. They're not interested in peace.

Reason We have to crush the world's 1.5 billion Muslims under our hood? In concrete terms, what does that mean, "defeat Islam?"

Hirsi Ali I think that we are at war with Islam. And there's no middle ground in wars. Islam can be defeated in many ways. For starters, you stop the spread of the ideology itself. At present, there are militant Westerners converting to Islam, and they're the most fanatical sometimes. There is infiltration of Islam in the schools and universities of the West. You stop that. You stop the [illegible] burning and the effigy burning, and you look them in the eye and flex your muscles and you say, "This is a warning. We won't accept this.

Dalrymple.

The world's worst building

Da rymple cannot positively assert that the Centre Georges Pompidou (1971 77, Renzo Piano, R chard Rogers and Gianfranco Franch n) is the worst bu ding in the world but

> I should be surprised if anyone were able to point to a building that was very much worse

If Jack the Ripper had been an architect, > the Centre Pompidou is what he would have built for he preferred his entrails out rather than in The savage, gory mess that is the Centre Pompidou would have pleased him no end, perhaps he would even have obtained a sexual thr from contemplating a the eviscerated intestinal pipes that writhe so uselessly around the elegant core of the building.

The Centre Pompidou

> screams Look at me! at the passer-by. Look upon the originality of the architect who built me, and despair! He has done something that you, stuck upon your tramlines of conventional thought and judgment, could neither have thought nor dared to do.

Jaw-dropping racism.

UNITED NATIONS — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said Tuesday Japan is ready to help countries grow their economies to tackle challenges posed by falling birth rates and an aging population before opening its doors to refugees.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe announced at the U.N. General Assembly that Japan is ramping up assistance in response to the exodus of refugees to Europe from the Middle East and Africa.

He said Japan will provide $1.5 billion in emergency aid for refugees and for stabilization of communities facing upheaval. Speaking through an interpreter, Abe said Tuesday he will ask the heads of Japan's aid agency to focus on those fleeing.

"I would say that before accepting immigrants or refugees we need to have more activities by women, by elderly people and we must assist them in their area."

ALL YOUR SJWs ARE BELONG TO US!

> Hi Paul, I used to be a vile SJW, until I stumbled across your work along with Milo and Dennis Prager. I am 16 and spent most of teens assimilating to a distorted brand of socialism, whilst, blindly giving in to capitalism. I have now made the transition into conservatism and this transition has ironically made me more open minded. From someone who openly wanted to stop free speech from certain groups to now defending every single aspect of freedom of speech. I am extremely tired of 'PC' culture and the other diabolical forces of the left. As a result of your work I have become 'red pilled'. Conservatism is the new counter culture and popularism is the new punk and I am tremendously honoured and proud to be apart of this new movement

The media STILL feigns impartiality as if the Podesta email revelations never happened.

You've been exposed. You're all shameless hacks.

> Reading the emails, we witness CNBC/New York Times contributor John Harwood slathering Podesta with flattery, giving him campaign advice and praising Hillary Clinton. In another email, the Washington Post's Juliet Eilperin offers Podesta a "heads up" about a story she's about to publish, providing a brief pre-publication synopsis. CNBC's Becky Quick promises to "defend" Obama appointee Sylvia Mathews Burwell.
> New York Times Magazine writer Mark Leibovich (who wrote a famous book lambasting permanent Washington's courtship rituals) asks Clinton's press secretary, Jennifer Palmieri, for permission to use portions of an off-the-record interview with the candidate. Palmieri withholds only a couple of comments and concludes her email to Leibovich, "Pleasure doing business!," giving it a creepy, transactional vibe. Politico reporter Glenn Thrush sends Podesta a chunk of his story-in-progress "to make sure I'm not fucking anything up." Beyond WikiLeaks, a January 2015 Clinton strategy document obtained by the Intercept describes reporter Maggie Haberman—then at Politico and now at the New York Times—as someone the campaign "has a very good relationship with," and who had been called upon to "tee up stories for us before" and had never disappointed.[7]

Remember when O'Reilly threatened to sick "security" on a caller who said things he didn't like? Left was outraged.

CNN has done way worse.

O'Reilly threatened radio show caller with "a little visit" from "Fox security" for mentioning Olbermann's name on the air

E MILL CAN

Like 2 Share Tweet G+1 3

On his nationally syndicated radio show Bill O'Reilly threatened to turn over the personal information of a caller to 'Fox security' because the caller mentioned MSNBC's Keith Olbermann. As Media Matters has noted, in recent weeks, Olbermann has repeatedly awarded O'Reilly the "Worst Person in the World" designation during his show, MSNBC's Countdown with Keith Olbermann.

Nailed it. CNN's reaction to the meme and them blackmailing the memer is classic elitism & treating public like uncontrollable animals.

> If it was daft and unpresidential of Trump to tweet that meme, the mainstream media's reaction to his tweet has been positively unhinged. The suggestion that a jokey vid showing Trump wrestling a CNN logo head could incite real world violence against journalists is just the classic old censorship argument. The public is gullible and stupid and if they see this image, read this book, hear this song they will go out and beat someone up. That elitist prejudice lurks behind pretty much every attempt at a story to control speech, and it lurks behind the media freakout over Trump's tweeting of this meme, too. The media's view of right-leaning web users, especially the younger ones who while away their days on Reddit and 4Chan and other free-for-all hangouts, has become crystal clear in recent days. It views them almost as animals, certainly as incredibly dangerous, so brain-fried and morally arrested that if they see one salty meme they might storm CNN's HQ

Alright folks, the time has come
It's time to stand up for ourselves and our way of life, and to finally kill the lying mass of shit that is CNN. The next meme war is upon us, and together we will win

>[illegible]

1. UNITE THE PEOPLE. Right now, Reddit and r/TheDonald are our allies. We may not like them but we don't have to. We are fighting a common enemy. Imagine the US/Britain being allies with the Soviets during WW2 I guess. We must unite the other sites as well as this is an attack on the internet way of life as a whole and we will need everyone in order to win this. We are no longer 4channers or redditors, we are the Internet.
2. FULL SCALE MEME WAR- Everyone should be producing as many anti-CNN memes as possible and spreading it to all of the normie sites and whatnot. Remember, nothing too racist or edgy, but Pepe should be good because CNN looses its shit over him, and that can make them look like even

New York Times Falls for Parody North Korea Twitter Account

The New York Times reported Tuesday that a statement from a parody North Korea Twitter account was an actual statement from the North Korean government.

The Times story on a joint military exercise between the United States and South Korea noted that "the North Korean government belittled the joint exercise as demonstrating near total ignorance of ballistic science."

But that statement came from the parody @DPRK_News account in what was evidently a satirical tweet.

This isn't Kaczynski's first attempt at destroying a private citizen's life. As a BuzzFeed reporter, he gained notoriety for publicizing a lame joke Tweeted by a 30-year-old PR director named Justine Sacco. As Sacco was boarding a plane from London to Cape Town, South Africa, she poked fun at many people's poor understanding of the continent. Kaczynski decided the joke was racist and helped gin up a digital lynch mob while she was in the air for 11 hours sans internet. By the time Sacco landed, she was mobbed by reporters, was fired from her job, and had to go into hiding.

Macron clearly has sociopathic tendencies.

REUTERS

"JUPITERIAN" PRESIDENT

Macron himself has said he plans a "Jupiterian" presidency - as a remote, dignified figure, like the Roman god of gods, who weighs his rare pronouncements carefully. It would be a marked break from his unpopular and often-mocked predecessor Francois Hollande's man-of-the-people style.

Trudeau thinks immigrants belong in Canada more than actual Canadians.

Let that sink in.

"I always sort of laugh when you see people who are - not many of them but - intolerant or who think, 'Go back to your own country.' Trudeau said in the television interview.

No!" Trudeau continued. "You chose this country. This is your country more than it is for others because we take it for granted."

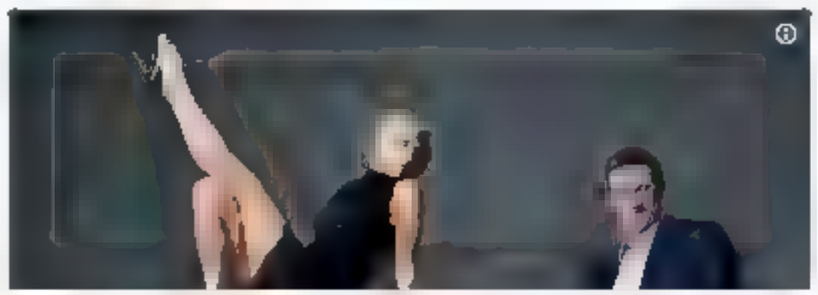
USA Today recognizes my strong Twitter performance yesterday.

usatoday com/story/news/pol ...

From others on the right: Media can dish it out, but can't take it



Not all conservatives were critical of the tweets. [illegible] editor Paul Joseph Watson said the reaction to Trump's tweets was proof that "the mainstream media" can "dish it out, but they can't take it in."

> There s more outrage from he eft over Tr mp s M ka Brzezinsk tweet than the attempted ·assac e of Repub cans earl er th s month. That s not a c che. There gen ·nely s
> Th s s the same med a that has re ent ess·y and vic ·us·y savaged Tr mp over h s hair his hands and other asper s of h s persona appearance for the best part of the ·ast ·wo years

Watson also derided what he sees as feminist hypocrisy.

"In this era of relentless in-your-face feminism thought women were supposed to be strong?" Watson wrote. "Are Trump s critics saying Mika Brzezinsk can t take an insult & give it back? How sexist!"

Watson also pointed to a Vanity Fair photoshoot in which Brzezinski showed off her legs while posing on top of a desk.

The rise of the Corbynistas is what happens when infantilism meets politics.

Infantile political mania

To give way to political mania is, writes Dalrymple > to ascribe to politicians more directive power over society than they possess, except under circumstances that, thankfully, are unusual in the West > to regress to childhood, a time when one believes in the omnipotence of one's parents who, as adults, seem as if they can do whatever they like—a power to which the child believes he will accede merely by adding years to his age

Dalrymple doubts, for instance, whether anyone other than an intellectual or, say the London newspaper the Guardian > ever thought that America had changed utterly and unrecognisably overnight with the election of Mr Trump

With regard to political apathy, Dalrymple says that it can > give rise to gusts of irrational hope, particularly among the young, who then invest their favored political figure with the power, or the aura of having the power, to remove the source of all their frustrations (real as these might be)

The rise of Bernie Sanders and Jeremy Corbyn > who thrill the young with their preposterous and dangerous notions, is proof of this Twitter showing its partisan bias AGAIN.

ALL videos are "edited".

The context was clear.

This is NOT an argument.

WASHINGTON (CNN) — As some in the Bush administration press the case for a pre-emptive strike against Iraq, weapons experts say there is mounting evidence that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has amassed large stocks of chemical and biological weapons he is hiding from a possible U.S. military attack.

"Iraq continues to possess several tons of chemical weapons agents, enough to kill thousands and thousands of civilians or soldiers," said Jon Wolfsthal, an analyst with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

CNN's Jim Acosta is a biased far-left activist posing as a reporter who works for a fake news organization.

> CNN reporter Jim Acosta badgered and interrupted Sean Spicer, White House press secretary, several times on Monday about the lack of on-camera access at the daily briefings. Briefings became regularly televised in the mid-1990s. Spicer did not take a question from Acosta.

Britain is on a knife edge, and anti-rich demagoguery is on the upsurge.

Corbyn panders to the instincts of the mob

Britain, writes Dalrymple

> s on a knife edge and anti-rich demagoguery is on the upsurge

> has suggested requisition ng property by fiat for reasons of socia justice Fo owing the disastrous fire n Grenfell Tower Corbyn proposed seizing the houses of wealthy foreigners (mostly Arabs and Russians)

Dalrymple points out that Corbyn s policy

> s to ncrease government spend ng enormously wh e ba ancing the budget this can only mean much higher taxation and given his socia views this in turn can only mean taxation on the rich and even the modestly prosperous both of whom he regards as m ich cows. But unless he exercises explicit power to keep them where they are (which he would not be above attempt ng), they w flee and take their cap tal French exports of their rich will seem a trickle by comparison

In Britain, says Da rymple

> the degradation of the popu ation has gone much further than in France British culture which has become one of crude and vulgar self-ndu gence, is in mical to rapid improvement and now n addition there has been a recrudescence of the notion that wealth derives from red.stribution rather than from creation.
